Nest Secure review: Nest Secure home security system is smart, but spendy

I wouldn't mind getting Nest Secure as a gift, but $499 is a lot for a home security starter kit.

Editors' note, Oct. 21, 2020: Google has discontinued the Nest Secure Alarm System and will no longer be selling the DIY home security system, but will continue to provide support to existing Nest Secure customers. The original review, published Nov. 9, 2017, follows.

Nest Secure

$157 at Walmart

$116 at Amazon

THE GOOD

The $499 Nest Secure alarm system starter kit is incredibly easy to arm and disarm and its Detect sensors do a lot more than monitor whether a door is open or closed.

THE BAD

It's expensive and locks you into Google's smart home platform.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Nest Secure works well, but its value is only so-so, especially if you aren't sold on incorporating Nest thermostats, locks and other Google devices to your smart home.

The Nest Secure alarm system starter pack, complete with one Guard hub, two Tag key fobs and two Detect door/window/motion sensors, costs $499.

Existing and upcoming DIY home security systems from Abode, Scout, iSmartAlarm, SimpliSafe and Wink are all less expensive. Only the $500 Honeywell Smart Home Security System and the $550 SmartThings kit developed jointly with professional security firm ADT are in the same price range.

Read more: Google is killing off the Works with Nest program and it could mess up your smart home set up

Nest needed to do something pretty spectacular to make us want to spend this much. In some ways it succeeded. The system is responsive, the Tag fobs make arming and disarming effortless and the ability to temporarily disarm the Detect sensors at one door or window is truly innovative. Open a window, take the dog out or step outside to talk to a neighbor without sending the house into a frenzy of alerts, accompanied by the Guard's blaring 85-decibel siren.

Is that enough to make it worth buying? Maybe... if you already own (or plan to buy) Nest-branded thermostats, smoke detectors and locks for a completely integrated Google/Nest smart home. But if you're simply looking for a decent DIY home security system, consider Abode, or look ahead to the new Honeywell, Wink and SmartThings systems (and maybe Ring's, if it gets past its ADT lawsuit).

Note: The Nest Secure system is currently only available in the United States. At the current exchange rate, $499 converts to roughly £380 and AU$650.

Installing Nest Secure is (kinda) easy

White plastic accessories are commonplace in the DIY home security market. I understand why manufacturers opt for white rather than, say, bright red (aw, remember the Revolv hub?). Going for basic white is a comparatively discreet way to add sensors and other monitoring devices to a home. But once, just once, I'd like to see something that's still neutral but a bit less boring -- maybe a matte gray?

Unfortunately, Nest didn't stray from the white plastic accessory paradigm here, but I will say its hardware feels more durable than iSmartAlarm and SimpliSafe hubs and sensors.

Setup

Nest Detect

Something went wrong

We're having trouble connecting to the assisting Nest product. Make sure you're close to it, that it's online and that your phone is connected to the same Wi-Fi network.

NS030

Try again

Connecting the devices to the app is easy (with one potentially significant caveat). Download/open the Nest app on your Android or iOS device, create an account/login to your existing account and select "Add product" from the settings menu. Scan the QR code on each device, starting with the Guard hub and follow the instructions to connect everything.

I am haunted by this error message.

Screenshot by Megan Wollerton/CNET

Secure's hardware installs easily, thanks to strong adhesive backings and easy in-app instructions. The wired Guard hub should sit on a flat surface near the door you use most often (front door, garage entrance); Tags should go on key chains/purses/backpacks; Detects install on doors, windows or walls.

This should take less than 10 minutes in theory, but certain routers are not compatible with Nest Secure. I first tested Secure at the CNET Smart Apartment, where we have an Asus RT-AC88U router. The Guard and Tags paired in just a few minutes, but both of the Detect sensors consistently returned the same error (see the screenshot above).

After attempting every possible troubleshooting strategy with Nest, I tried a second Nest Secure kit at the same location with the exact same result. I abandoned the first system at the apartment and tried the second system at my house on an Apple AirPort Time Capsule, and at the CNET Smart Home with an Asus RT-AC87U. At both locations the complete Secure system installed without the NS030 error message in roughly five minutes.

Of course, not every router out there will work with every smart home device and Nest publishes the list of routers it has issues with to offer guidance. But our Asus RT-AC88U isn't on the list. Basically, Nest told me new potential incompatibilities might arise with a new system like Nest Secure.

Here's why: Secure uses the Nest Weave communication protocol during the initial configuration process, which also means an option called IPv6 should be enabled on your router (so Weave can work optimally). What's frustrating is that your otherwise Nest-Secure-compatible router might not have IPv6 enabled as a default setting. So you'll most likely have to log in to your router and make that change manually.

That's annoying enough to have to do, but it didn't actually help in my case. I enabled IPv6 and I got the same error trying to pair the Detect sensors. I'm still working with Nest to determine if another router setting could be causing the issue, but this shouldn't happen at most homes. If you get a weird error, you can always contact Nest customer support, but it's frustrating that consumers should have to deal with this kind of thing. Smart home devices can be intimidating enough to install without diving into your router settings.

Getting to know Nest Secure

Nest Secure's features are competitive with DIY home security systems we've reviewed in the past. Take a look at the chart below to see how Secure stacks up:

Comparing DIY security systems

	Nest Secure	Abode	Scout	iSmartAlarm	SimpliSafe
Hardware cost	$499 (starter kit)	$300 (starter kit)	$276 (hub and accessories, no camera)	$150 (starter kit)	$230 (starter kit)

Required monthly fees	None	None	$10	None	None technically, but you need to pay the $15 - $25 contract-free fee to access any remote features
Professional monitoring	Yes ($20/month for a 3 year commitment or $25 month-to-month)	Yes ($30/month, includes cellular backup)	Yes ($20/month, includes cellular backup)	No	Yes (no extra charge)
Cellular backup	Yes ($5/month)	Yes ($10/month without professional monitoring)	Yes (no extra charge)	No	Yes (no extra charge)
Power outage backup	Yes	Yes	Yes	No	Yes
Camera	Yes (add any Nest Cam)	Yes (add $150)	Yes (add $169)	Yes (add $100)	Yes (add $100)
ZigBee/Z-Wave compatibility	No	ZigBee and Z-Wave	ZigBee only	No	No
Smart home partners	Google Assistant, Nest	Alexa, IFTTT, Nest	Alexa, IFTTT, Nest	IFTTT	Nest

Nest's optional professional monitoring comes courtesy of Moni. It costs $20/month for a 3 year commitment or $25 on a month-to-month basis.

On Nov. 8 T-Mobile announced it would be the exclusive partner for Nest Secure cellular backup. T-Mobile Nest plan subscribers are supposed to get Nest Aware and cellular backup for $15 per month ($10 per month "after a $5 monthly bill credit").

Other home security systems

- Honeywell's robust DIY security system has potential
- Wink gives us yet another DIY security system to choose from
- SmartThings and ADT tackle DIY smart home monitoring

Nest Aware is Nest's optional cloud video recording and storage subscription service for all of its home security cameras, so this particular T-Mobile service plan only makes sense if you have a Nest Cam and want Nest Aware in addition to Nest Secure cellular backup. Adding a Nest Cam (with Nest Aware) to the system means the camera will automatically record whenever the Secure system detects unexpected motion or other activity.

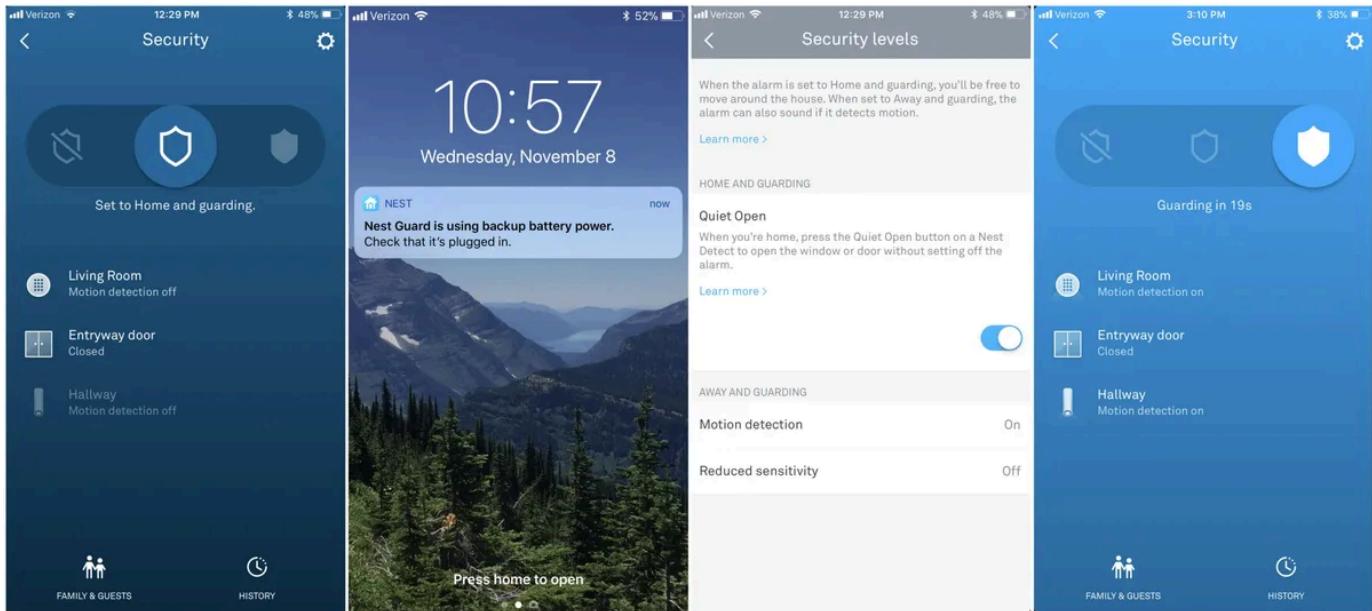

Nest, a Google-owned property, tells me they're "looking into" integration with Google Assistant. Since the Nest Cam IQ just started supporting Google Assistant, I wouldn't be surprised if Secure starts working with it soon, too.

Using Nest Secure was straightforward. Nest assigns you a 6-digit PIN for arming and disarming, one that I immediately forgot (you can also create your own custom PIN). I found myself naturally reaching for a Tag or the Nest app to arm and disarm the system instead. Still, it's nice that you have options. The Guard's built-in 85-decibel siren is loud enough to startle you and anyone else nearby.

The main settings options are "alarm off," "home and guarding," and "away and guarding," which you can adjust from the Guard, the app or with a Tag. Away and guarding mode means any motion detected in the house or open/close activity detected at a door or window will send you an alert and turn on the siren; you'll also get an email. Home and guarding mode will only react if a Detect sensor notices that a door or window was opened. Motion inside the home won't register.

My favorite Nest Secure feature is Quiet Open. With this option, you can temporarily disable the Detect door- and window-mounted sensors in home and guarding mode. So if you want to grab the newspaper in the morning, you don't have to disable the whole system; you just have to press the button on the Detect that's attached to the door you're opening. The status light will turn green, letting you know you have 10 seconds to open the door. Step outside (but leave the door open; it will rearm otherwise) and then back in while your Nest Secure continues to monitor the rest of the house.

Detect sensors are also equipped with something called Pathlight. Pathlight illuminates the Detect sensor's light when it's dark in the house and you're walking nearby. You can adjust the brightness in the app, too, in addition to turning it off.

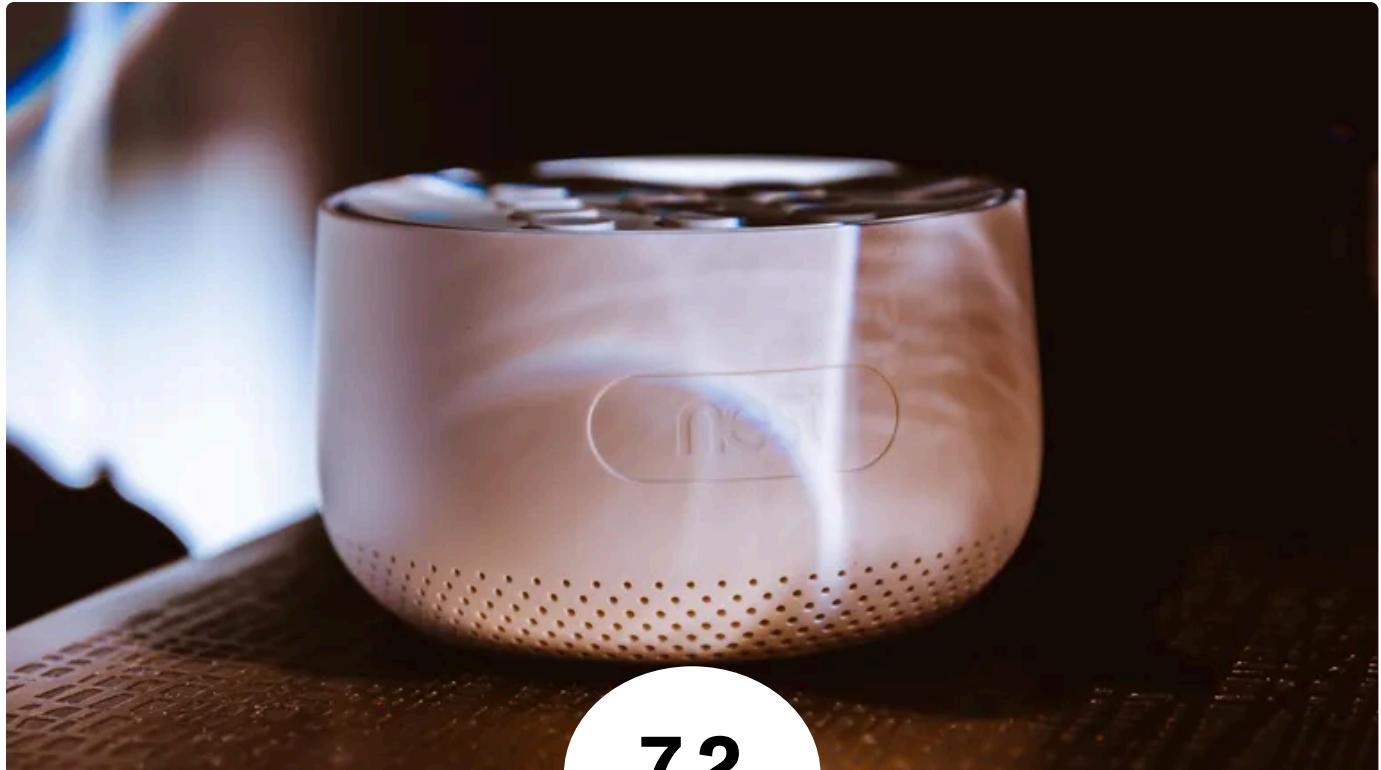

It's easy to view and make changes to your Nest Secure system in the app.

Screenshots by Megan Wollerton/CNET

The verdict

The $499 Nest Secure alarm system performs well and the app is easy to navigate. It's priced higher than most home security systems, but Nest backs it up with advanced features like Pathlight, Quiet Open and the ability to use other Nest devices with the system (and in the same app). Nest Secure will also likely work with Google Assistant soon. Still, I don't think Nest Secure is right for everyone, especially if you don't currently have or plan to buy other Nest-brand smart home products. The less expensive Abode system will definitely get the job done.

What are Prime Big Deal Days?

Amazon's October Prime Day event is officially called Prime Big Deal Days, but the shopping extravaganza essentially functions as a second Amazon Prime Day event ahead of the holiday season. If you've never shopped during a Prime Day sale before, you might be wondering exactly what it entails, so here's a brief explainer. It's a two-day Amazon sale that offers exclusive savings to Amazon Prime subscribers with limited-time offers, flash deals and rock-bottom prices. It's a rare chance to score Black Friday-level pricing outside of November, so it's usually well worth shopping. The Prime Big Deal Days event took place this year on Oct. 8 and 9. However, some deals are lingering on a little past the official end of the sale.

When is Amazon's Prime Big Deal Days 2024 event?

Amazon's Prime Big Deal Days were held on Oct. 8 to Oct. 9 this year. Generally speaking, most deals ended at midnight on Oct. 9 this time around. Some deals have lingered beyond the set times of the sale event, but they could end at any time.

As you can see from the history of Prime Day dates below, Amazon has held its Prime Day sales each July, with just a couple of deviations from that regular schedule. Notably, in 2020, Amazon pushed its Prime Day sale to October due to the COVID-19 pandemic, before returning the sale to the summer in 2021 in a slightly earlier June spot. Prime Day returned to its July slot for 2022, although Amazon did use October once again for an additional Prime Early Access Sale event that acted as a kickoff to the holiday shopping season. Last year, it was the same July-October pattern, but Amazon also added a new (not Prime-exclusive) sale for 2024 with the inaugural Amazon Big Spring Sale.

As a reference, here are the Prime Day dates from previous years and including this year's events:

- Prime Day 2015: July 15
- Prime Day 2016: July 12.
- Prime Day 2017: July 11 to 12 (first to last longer than one day)
- Prime Day 2018: July 16 to 17
- Prime Day 2019: July 15 to 16.
- Prime Day 2020: Oct. 13 to 14 (delayed by COVID-19 pandemic)
- Prime Day 2021: June 21 to 22 (the earliest to date)
- Prime Day 2022: July 12 to 13
- Prime Early Access Sale 2022: Oct. 11 to 12
- Prime Day 2023: July 11 to 12
- Prime Big Deal Days 2023: Oct. 10 to 11
- Amazon Big Spring Sale: March 20 to 25
- Prime Day 2024: July 16 to 17
- Prime Big Deal Days 2024: Oct. 8 to Oct 9

Have other retailers launched anti-Prime Deal Days sales?

Each Prime Day event brings with it other retailers announcing sales that directly compete with Amazon's event, and it's no different this October, either. We've seen other retailers launch sales -- like Walmart's Holiday Deals event and Best Buy's anti-Prime sales -- providing plenty of options to choose from.

Are Amazon Prime Deal Days deals worth buying?

In short, yes. Thousands of items see price reductions during the event, with some of the deals returning to or reaching all-time low prices. Because there is no telling how much inventory is available or how long the price cuts will last, you'll want to act quickly under those circumstances.

Does Prime Day happen twice a year?

Looking at past years, there has been a second Prime Day-style sale in October for the past two years now. It started in 2022 as the Prime Day Early Access sale. In 2023, the trend continued with the Prime Big Deal Days sale, and Amazon has once again utilized this spot on the calendar for a Prime Day sale on Oct. 8 and 9.

What's the difference between Prime Big Deal Days vs. Prime Day?

There are lots of similarities between the two sales. Many of the same deals return during the October sale, especially on Amazon's own devices, such as Blink and Ring home security devices, Fire TVs and tablets, Echo devices and more.

The main difference is related to the timing of the sale. Since July Prime Day is in the summer, there's more focus on back-to-school and outdoor deals. This includes school supplies, grills, lawnmowers and more. During October Prime Day, we see more deals geared toward the upcoming holiday season, such as kitchenware for a Thanksgiving meal or kids' toys and games for Christmas. It's a great time to grab Christmas gifts ahead of the holiday rush.

How does Prime Big Deal Days work?

The idea behind the sale is pretty simple: Subscribers to Amazon's Prime service can get exclusive discounts on thousands of products and services across the site during a limited period. The products, while still available to non-Prime members, will have extra savings for members, with many prices dropping down to new all-time lows.

When you're logged in to your Prime account and looking at a product landing page, you'll see the discounted price if it's on sale. You don't need any special coupon codes, nor is there a need to use a specific payment method to get the discounts. If you spend your money wisely each year, you can easily make back your Prime membership cost in savings during the event.

What products go on sale for Prime Big Deal Days?

Since Amazon sells pretty much everything, its Prime Big Deal Days bonanza features deals on pretty much everything too. Whether you're shopping for tech, kitchen gear, outdoor furniture or everyday essentials, October Prime Day should offer something in the way of savings for you.

In past sale events, some of the best savings have been on Amazon devices. This includes Kindle readers, Echo speakers, Fire TVs and more. It's not just Amazon's own brands that see steep discounts. During the sale you will be able to grab great deals across a variety of big-name brands, including significant savings on items like laptops, TVs and fitness gear, to name a few.

Do Prime deals change throughout the day?

Unfortunately, yes. All the deals we listed here, and the rest of the deals on Amazon, are subject to change at any given time before, after and even during the sale event. Here at CNET, we're constantly going through our pages to make sure that they are updated with the latest prices. However, since prices can change at any time if you see something you like, we recommend buying it as soon as possible before the price changes, the deal expires or the item becomes unavailable.

Do you need to be an Amazon Prime member to shop Prime Big Deal Days deals?

Yes, Amazon's Prime Deal Days sale requires a Prime subscription if you want to nab any of the Prime-exclusive deals. You don't have to be a paying subscriber, as long as the event falls within your Prime trial period. That means you can start your monthlong trial just before the event and get in on the savings for free. For more info on that, check out our guide to getting Amazon Prime perks without paying for a subscription.

Do Prime Big Deal Days deals last both days?

Some do, others don't. New deals get added regularly, and old ones sell out or get changed. Our CNET experts monitored the sale to keep this page updated throughout the event as deals expired or any new finds cropped up, and though the event has officially ended for 2024, we're still updating this page with the Prime Day deals still remaining, so keep checking back.

Where can I find the best October Prime Day Deals still available?

The CNET Deals team covers all of the best price drops, discounts and deals daily from all the top retailers. Whether it's a one-day promo at Woot, a weekend sale at Best Buy or a coupon code for a product at Amazon, if it's a great deal, we'll be covering it.
